New York during the last summer. ut one year ago this tribe and that Henry Stanley were encamped near oatsville, Md. Young Hicks met the girl, who was then, according to the them. statement of her father, only fourteen years old. The youthful pair developed a great fondness for one another and met chandestinely. When the father learned of the attachment, there was trouble which ended in a feud between the tribes. Fower Small moved away, but Hicks declared he would soon return. On Saturday night last, while Stanley's band was encamped on the outskirts of Blue-ball, Cecil County, Md., the girl was call-day by the Rev. William H. Purnell, of that place. In the meantime the father mounted his horse and endeavored to catch the eloping couple, but was frustrated by the darkness of the night and his uncertainty as to the direction in which they had traveled.

He reached Newcastle the next morning, but in the meantime the couple had boarded a train for Baltimore. He then telegraphed to the police to look out for and arrest Hicks on the charge of enticing his daughter from home. Yesterday afternoon they were taken into custody while walking. Hicks displayed his marriage certificate, but was held nevertheless. The bride, a really beautiful girl, declared the was eighteen years old, and would not leave her husband. Hicks is about twenty-three years old. He says he is bound for Virginia to join his people, who are encamped near Norfolk. The girl's father is expected to-morrow.

DIAMOND IN HIS DUCK.

$90 Gem in the Bird.

NEW YORK, Oct. 39.—Joseph Victoria, a shoemaker, of Riverhead, L. I., yester-day received a wild duck from E. Moutoux, who had shot it at the sound shore.

When Joseph dressed the duck he discovered what he at first thought was a nicce of glass. The shoemaker finally took it to a jeweler, who pronounced it a diamond worth at least $90.

"This gun was built under an allotment of $33,000 made by the board as Sandy Hook during a test, is discussed in the report as follows:

"This gun was built under an allotment of $32,000 made by the board as September 15, 1896. On December 22, 1899, the completed gun was inspected by the board as the shops of the Reading Iron Company, Reading, P.a., and on January 9, 1909, it was shipped to the proving ground at Sandy Hook.

"Owing to delays, on the part of the shops of the Brown patents in designating a suitable powder, the preliminary firing, tests of the gun were not begun until February 21, 1901. The first proof round, with a pressure of 19,000 pounds, developed a crack extending throughout the third chase hoop. As this hoop is safely a thin covering used to protect the board, three additional rounds were fired with pressures ranging from 15,000 pounds to 25,300 pounds. It being evident from these and subsequent rounds that with the special kind of powder determined upon by the trustees the required velocity could not be obtained, the board on Aprile 19, 1901.
